THE LABOR RESEARCH ADVISORY COUNCIL:

ITS ORGANIZATION AND FUNCTIONS

The Labor Research Advisory Council, like the Business Research Advisory Council, serves in an advisory capacity with respect to technical problems arisng out of the statistical work of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, consults with respect to Bureau programs, and provides perspectives on Bureau programs in relation to labor union needs. The members of the Council are union research directors and staff members. The Council has functioned since 1947 to ensure that the Bureau's immediate and long-run programs meet current and anticipated needs; to provide sound advice on the numerous basic technical problems which constantly arise in the Bureau's activities; and to ensure understanding and acceptance of the Bureau's statistical series and analytical reports.

As their names imply, the Bureau's Advisory Councils are advisory to the Commissioner of Labor Statistics. While the views of the members of the Councils, individually and collectively, are of great assistance to the Bureau in formulating decisions on policy and technical matters, the responsibility for such decisions is ultimately that of the Commissioner of Labor Statistics.

The Labor Research Advisory Council (formerly the Joint Labor Research Advisory Committee) was established by the Commissioner of Labor Statistics in 1947. Its establishment followed upon discussions by the Commissioner with representatives of the American Federation of Labor, the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and the Railway Labor Executives Association. Prior to the setting up of this body, the Bureau had held periodic conferences of trade union research directors.

The members of the Council are designated by the Commissioner of Labor Statistics under authorization of the Secretary of Labor, from nominations by the Director of Research, AFL-CIO, on behalf of affiliated unions, and by other unions upon invitation of the Commissioner. The term of appointment to the Council is for 2 years, subject to renewal.

Meetings of the Council are convened by the Commissioner of Labor Statistics after consultation with the Chairperson of the Council. Although the general practice has been to invite all trade union research directors who may be interested to participate in Council meetings, the Council alone may be convened where special circumstances require this.

The Council provides general direction to the advisory activities of trade union research directors in relation to the Bureau. It functions mainly through its standing committees, through ad hoc committees, and through interim meetings. Council meetings are generally reserved for discussion of broader policy and technical items.

The detailed work of the Council is performed through its committees. These meet with the chiefs and staff of the various divisions of the Bureau to discuss both the prospective programs and the day-to-day problems confronting the Bureau in its activities of collecting, tabulating and analyzing statistics, and in the publication of analytical reports. The current Committees of the Council are: Foreign Labor and Trade; Occupational Safety and Health Statistics; Employment Structure and Analysis; Prices and Living Conditions; Productivity, Technology and Growth; and Wages and Industrial Relations. These meet two or three times a year. As new problems arise, special committees may be designated for specific purposes. Individual committee members may be designated from time to time to provide special technical services to the operating divisions.

The policies pertaining to the Labor Research Advisory Council may be summarized as follows:

1. The function of the Council is to provide advice on the current and projected programs and techniques of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Responsibility for decisions on these matters ultimately rests with the Commissioner.

2. The members of the Council, on their own motion, may raise any matter concerning the Bureau's work, relating either to techniques or to program. Similarly, the Commissioner may take up any such matter to obtain the advice of the Council.

3. The members of the Council and its committees provide advice as expert technicians who are most familiar with the technical needs in the areas of the Bureau's work and administrative arrangements within trade unions generally. Their participation is intended to ensure that the Bureau obtains representative advice, first, on general union facilities for providing information to the Bureau; second, on current general union needs, and third, on general union views regarding the Bureau's program plans.

4. Membership on the Council and its committees is intended to serve the following purposes:

   (a) provide for adequate and representative advice to the Bureau on the many, and frequently challenging, technical and program matters confronting it; and

   (b) deepen familiarity on the part of union research directors with the Bureau's program and operations.

The Labor Research Advisory Council, upon recommendation of the Commissioner of Labor Statistics and authorization of the Secretary of Labor, may be continued for successive 2-year periods, a provision applicable to all advisory committees under the Federal Advisory Committee Act (Public Law 92-463, approved October 6, 1972). In accordance with the requirements of the Act, the meetings of the Council and its committees are open to public observers, with advance publication of meeting schedules and agenda in the Federal Register.
